Exclusive interview with Sue Walsh

Lecturer and accredited bird ringer Sue talks to us about wildlife watching and what to expect on board our ships.

Experience: 40 years
Specialism: Naturalist

What are some of the most extreme locations you've been to watch wildlife?

I have travelled to over 90 countries on all continents. There are so many types of extremes. Geographical extremes would include the remoteness of Antarctica, Kamchatka, the Arctic, the Tien Shan mountains of Kazakhstan, the desert of Sudan and the villages of Wuyuan in China. Climate extremes include the cold of Japan and Canada in Winter, the heat of Ghana, Arizona and United Arab Emirates. Extremes of cultural development include Central Park in New York or the parks of Hong Kong compared to remote settlements in various parts of, for example, Rwanda, Colombia, Nepal or Cambodia.

"I went to buy a bird book and a pair of binoculars – and have not looked back."

Gentoo penguin, Antarctica

Where did your love for wildlife watching come from?

My love for wildlife started with seeing a bird in Scotland over 40 years ago and wondering what it was. It turned out to be a Chaffinch. I went to buy a bird book and a pair of binoculars – and have not looked back. Over 5000 species of birds later I still travel the world looking for species which are new to me. Working on the ships has widened my interest to cetaceans and other aspects of the natural world.

What is bird ringing?

Bird ringing (UK) or bird banding (US) is the attachment of a small, individually numbered metal or plastic tag to the leg or wing of a wild bird to enable individual identification. Data is recorded on species, size and condition which generates information on the survival, productivity and movements of birds and contributes to their conservation.

What's been your favourite wildlife watching experience so far on board our cruises?

A Snow Petrel spent a long time flying round and landing on the ship giving us exceptional views of this beautiful bird. It is one of only three birds that has been seen at the Geographic South Pole and which have the most southerly breeding sites of any bird, inland in Antarctica.

What's a common misconception about wildlife watching?

People often ask me how seabirds sleep. A common comment about seabirds is 'they are a long way from home'. The sea is their home and they only come to land to breed. Most seabirds sleep on the wing shutting down half their brain at a time or by taking very short naps a few seconds at a time.

What's a typical lecture like on board our ships?

A typical lecture is about 45 minutes long and is intended to inform and entertain. They are usually held in the lounge on comfortable seats where you can enjoy a drink or snack if you wish. You will learn about the places you will be visiting and what you are likely to see as well as exploring wider topics. You will also get to know more about the expert team on board and have an opportunity to ask them questions.

Do you have any wildlife watching tips for our guests?

The more time you spend looking the luckier you get!

Sue's favourite moment on board was seeing a Snow Petrel land on the ship.

"I have travelled to over 90 countries on all continents."
